ABOUT UNIVERSITY

Punyashlok Ahilyadevi Holkar Solapur University, formerly known as Solapur University, is a distinguished state university established in 2004 by the Government of Maharashtra under the Maharashtra Public University Act of 2016. On 6th March 2019, the university was renamed in honor of Rajmata Ahilyadevi Holkar, a visionary queen, an adept ruler, and a revered political figure. This renaming was a tribute to her unparalleled legacy and exceptional contributions to society. Rajmata Ahilyadevi Holkar, one of the most courageous and valiant warriors from Maharashtra, earned the title 'Punyashlok' for her remarkable deeds and profound social work, which left an indelible mark on the history of India. Her reign is celebrated as an era of prosperity, peace, and economic strength in Madhya Pradesh, underpinned by her steadfast commitment to justice, equity, and the welfare of her people. Known for her wisdom, foresight, and benevolence, she continues to serve as a timeless inspiration to Indian society, especially in her contributions to the formation of modern India through the establishment of religious principles and the promotion of human values. In alignment with the values of this legendary queen, Punyashlok Ahilyadevi Holkar Solapur University is steadfast in its mission to empower students by providing them with high-quality education, cutting-edge knowledge, and the skills necessary to excel in the contemporary world. The university's dedication to these principles drives its continual growth and commitment to nurturing future leaders who carry forward the legacy of Rajmata Ahilyadevi Holkar.

ABOUT SCHOOL

The School of Languages and Literatures at Punyashlok Ahilyadevi Holkar Solapur University, Solapur, was established in 2018 with the objective of becoming a premier center for the study and research of languages and literatures. The school encompasses eight departments: Marathi, Hindi, English, Sanskrit, Urdu, Pali, Prakrit, and Kannada, each offering a comprehensive academic framework for the exploration of linguistic and literary traditions. Guided by a clear mission, the School of Languages and Literatures is committed to delivering exceptional education and research that equips students with advanced knowledge, critical thinking skills, and effective communication abilities. In addition to academic excellence, the school fosters the development of professional expertise, soft skills, and ethical values, ensuring that graduates emerge as well-rounded individuals prepared to navigate both professional and societal challenges. The school is focused on enhancing student employability by integrating innovative teaching practices, cutting-edge research, and an emphasis on creativity. Through its dynamic approach, the School of Languages and Literatures aims to produce graduates who are not only academically accomplished but also possess the necessary skills and character to contribute meaningfully to their chosen fields and to society at large.
